ARGUMENTS IN C. D. & M. CASE

Grow Very Heated Before Judge Goldsberry.

ATTORNEYS CALLED DOWN

Court Takes the Matter Under Advisement.

Attorney For Judge E. B. Kinkead Declares That Webb is Pushing a Scheme to Humiliate the Court And to Regain Control of Inter-urban Property—Claim is Made That Suit is Brought on Fraud.

With arguments of counsel concluded, the charges of bias and prejudice against Judge Edgar B. Kinkead in the Columbus, Delaware and Marion receivership litigation are now in the hands of Supervising Judge John W. Goldsberry of the fifth judicial district, whose home is in Chillicothe. Leave has been extended to Oscar M. Gotschall of Dayton, vice president of the Columbus, Delaware and Marion, to file an affidavit, and affidavits will be filed in behalf of several other directors, including N. J. Catrow of Miamisburg, the petitioning creditor in the case. If he chooses Attorney Guy M. Walker of New York will be allowed to file a counter affidavit. The affidavits of Gotschall and his fellow-directors must be in by Monday.

Court Calls Down Attorneys. The Ohio State Journal says: Arguments yesterday were featured by sharp rebuffs of counsel and once Judge Goldsberry intervened. This was in the morning, when Attorney Guy M. Walker, who objected to the line of argument of Attorney Harry F. West, rebuffed his first in West's direction and replied sharply to his remarks.

Attorney W. R. Pomerene for the court defended Judge Kinkead's attitude in refusing to withdraw from the case under fire. "It would have been easy," he said, "for Judge Kinkead to have had personal quiet and comfort if he had allowed Webb to manage the receivership. This proceeding," he continued, "is one step in a chain of steps by which Webb expects to regain control and have a receiver who will administer the trust in accordance with his wishes."

Scheme to Humiliate Court. The entire affair, he declared, was a systematic scheme to humiliate the court.

Judge Curtis C. Williams for the contestants waxed exceedingly warm in his strictures, declaring that he was not responsible for the affidavits and did not wish to impeach the integrity of Judge Kinkead, but that Eli M. West had exerted too much influence in the case.

Colonel Thomas E. Powell, who closed for the contestants, urged action on the affidavits largely because of the failure of jurisdiction. He charged that over $250,000 had been paid out to the bondholders without authority of law, and that Receiver West was responsible. Although the company was in default for an answer to the receivership proceedings, he declared, a decree had not been taken.

Alleges Fraudulent Claim. "They dare not take a decree," he said, "because the claim upon which the suit is built is fraudulent."

Although he placed at about $4,000,000 the figure spent in the road, Colonel Powell admitted that the road at public sale would not realize $1,000,000. The general creditors and most of the bondholders would never get their money, he declared.

Throughout his argument Attorneys Pomerene and West shot questions at him, and once when the question of removal of the receiver was broached Harry F. West declared that if a motion were made to remove the receiver, the receiver himself would urge that a judge other than Judge Kinkead should take cognizance of the motion.

Webb's Right to Avert Prejudice. The remaining affidavits deal largely with the right of Webb, as president, to file his affidavit of prejudice. It is the contention of attorneys for the court that Webb was not authorized to file an affidavit on behalf of the company, and that he could not file it in his own regard, as he is not a party to the suit.

FRED S. GRAYBILL BECOMES A POET

Wins a Prize in Ohio State Journal Contest.

Fred S. Graybill, of Blaine avenue this city, was yesterday's winner of the Ohio State Journal Contest, which sets forth in poetry the virtues of Journal brand soda. Mr. Graybill is some more poet when it comes to that jingling thing, but being a modest old-time print, he naturally doesn't wish his friends to know that he has the disease in a very malignant form.

Still at a dollar a jingle, Fred isn't contemplating the endowment of any public libraries and the attending physician says there is every prospect for an early and complete recovery.
